

FCC

April 28, 2008

I am an avid listener of K-LOVE and two other related faith based radio stations serving Metro Phoenix and the State of Arizona. I am concerned that the FCC rule changes being discussed may severely impact the ability of this and the other stations to provide the positive broadcasting that is so appealing to me and others. In a world that seems to be losing perspective on values from toddlers all the way up to adults it is so refreshing to hear the positive music, stories, and news that encourage my heart and life as well as all the members of my family on a daily basis. I have seen many so called advisory boards, in my life, turn into personal agenda's rather than representation of the real public, so I am concerned this would not provide proper representation, especially in this day and age of politics. K-LOVE, KFLR, and the other station operate on donations from listeners and do an amazing job as custodians of these funds to expand broadcasting where it can make a difference. Additional staffing and providing priority to the new low power FM Stations would limit the ability not only to expand and provide additional positive exposure to new communities, but would likely cause some areas to go off the air. I ask that you would really consider all facets of the rules being discussed and the impact it would have on some real positive things that have been happening in our country and I know for a fact, here in the greater Metro Phoenix area and the State of Arizona

Thanks
